Respecting Legacy, Adapting to Change

We are pleased to present our 2011 Annual Report, which looks back on an important year of both continuity and transition.

In 2011 we continued the Haas family's 65-year tradition of support for the Philadelphia region. As in previous years, we emphasized three primary areas of interest: cultural vitality; disadvantaged children; and environmental sustainability. We provided nearly $86 million in grants towards these and related causes.

As you look through the pages of this Annual Report you will see examples of work we funded. Every picture represents a story of leadership and vision on the part of our grantees and partners. We are pleased to support these efforts and proud of the impact they have had on our city and region.

Many of the stories reflect the imperative to adapt to new circumstances. This is a time of profound national change, and it demands that we all find new and better ways to do our work and solve problems. Consider a few examples from 2011.

Our support helped the Academy of Natural Sciences, one of the oldest and most important natural science museums in America, to merge with Drexel University. The new alliance provides advantages to both institutions. Backed by one of Philadelphia's fastest-growing universities, the Academy will be able to sustain its historic collection and expand its services. Capitalizing on the Academy's scientific resources, Drexel is poised to become a leading institution in local, national, and global dialogues about environmental policy and practice.

We helped the Philadelphia Zoo, with no physical room to expand, redefine how to use space by building an innovative network of animal trails that soars through the trees. Those trails provide a better environment for animals and a new experience for visitors to the nation's oldest zoo. It is also a model for reinvention that is being watched closely by other zoos.

With support from the Foundation, Mastery Charter Schools continued to redefine what is possible for children when old paradigms about K-12 education are allowed to evolve. As we look to the future, this type of progress is what is needed to help close the achievement gap for Philadelphia's children.

We continued our work on Philadelphia's Central Delaware Waterfront, helping to lead its rebirth as a great public gathering place and a generator for economic growth. We continued our conservation efforts throughout the region, with a particular emphasis on our local watersheds and the forests that protect them. And we remained significant investors in Philadelphia's diverse cultural sector, helping to build on its remarkable creative energy.

The year might best be summarized as one of respect for legacy coupled with recognition of the pressing urgency of adapting to a changing world. This urgency sets the context for our new strategic plan, which will be announced in late 2012 and launched at the beginning of 2013.

As we proceed into our new strategic plan, we will continue to make vital investments in the civic life of this region, and in doing so, identify new ways to become more effective and transparent. We will do the same as we ask of our grantees and partners. You should expect nothing less.

Sincerely,

Thomas Haas

Foundation Programs

This page reflects the Foundation's grantmaking priorities from 2001 to 2011. At press time, these funding programs have concluded. The Foundation will announce a new strategic plan and grantmaking priorities shortly after this Annual Report is published. Visit us online in late 2012 for information about our new funding programs.

Arts & Culture

Diverse artistic expression is a hallmark of a healthy region. Through our Arts & Culture program, we provide various types of core operating support for arts groups and cultural institutions, enabling them to pursue their creative missions with confidence in their organizations' future. We also fund work that broadly advances the region's cultural sector. Our funding strategies promote artistic achievement and encourage public participation in and support for the arts.

Children, Youth, & Families

When all children and families have access to opportunity, society benefits. Our Children, Youth, & Families program funds work in our region to promote a better early care and education system, more effective and equitable education policies, networks of developmental opportunities for older youth, and improvements to the systems supporting families. Our grantmaking focuses largely on critical transitions in the lives of children as they progress from birth, through early childhood, and into young adulthood.

Environment & Communities

Healthy ecosystems and communities are essential for a livable and economically competitive region. The Environment & Communities program uses an integrated grantmaking approach to enhance the sustainability of Greater Philadelphia's ecosystems and older communities. The program seeks to foster greater cross-sector collaborations that build on the assets of our region through revitalization of its urban core and protection and restoration of the region's natural assets, which we define as key landscapes and waterways. Our Environment & Communities program makes investments intended to catalyze innovation and leadership in the region.

Evaluation & Planning We believe that lessons gained from our grantmaking can be used to help keep our work relevant, effective, and valuable to the fields in which we work. The Foundation evaluates the progress of our funding strategies and seeks to create opportunities to learn and share knowledge acquired over time.

Communications We view strategic communications as a tool that can maximize the impact of our grants. When needed, the Foundation provides funding and other assistance to our grantees to develop practical communications approaches that advance our common goals.

The Central Delaware Waterfront Comes Alive

In 2011, the Delaware River Waterfront Corporation released the Master Plan for the Central Delaware, an ambitious document that seeks to “transform a six-mile length of Philadelphia’s Central Delaware River Waterfront into an authentic extension of the thriving city and vibrant neighborhoods immediately to its west.”

William Penn Foundation program officer Shawn McCaney notes that progress is already happening as a result of the plan’s recommendations. “The Delaware River Waterfront Corporation is implementing a pipeline of early action projects—such as Race Street Pier, connector streets, Washington Avenue Green, and the first phases of a riverfront trail—all of which reinforce the key tenet of the master plan on the ground: public access to the riverfront must be the organizing principle of the redevelopment of the Central Delaware.

Adding even more excitement to the waterfront mix, the Philadelphia Live Arts Festival and Philly Fringe is in the process of renovating the old water pumping station at the foot of Race Street Pier. The new facility will include an approximately 240-seat theater, the festival’s box office, a striking 2,000-square-foot restaurant, and administrative offices for the organization.

“With the Fringe and the Race Street Pier working together, you create an almost instant destination,” explains McCaney. “It’s a great example of creative placemaking on the waterfront, investing in projects that will help animate and activate community space.”

Philly's Unique Creativity

Philadelphia's cultural sector is the envy of many American cities. Teeming with theater, dance, visual arts, and myriad forms of music, Philadelphia is enlivened by hundreds of unique cultural organizations of all sizes.

Azuka Theatre, Vox Populi, Leah Stein Dance Company, and Tempesta di Mare are smaller arts organizations, but along with their peers, they represent an important dimension of Philadelphia's rich cultural community. All four groups received Foundation grants in 2011 and are featured in this spread, which merely begins to touch on the diversity and breadth of artistic expression in Philadelphia.

Expanding What Works

The future for public education in Philadelphia began looking brighter in 2011, thanks to new leadership in key civic institutions and an emerging openness to school models that work for students.

The Great Schools Fund, an ambitious effort by the Philadelphia Schools Partnership to raise $100 million, will invest in proven models of success for low-income students. The Fund will drive rapid expansion of the most promising K-12 models, including traditional public, charter, and parochial schools, allowing more of Philadelphia's students to benefit from the best innovations in education.

Janet Haas, M.D., chair of the Foundation's board, emphasizes the opportunity for other philanthropic and civic leaders to join a cause critical to the long-term health of our community. "We need many more philanthropists to rally around a common vision for excellent schools. Our children's future depends on it, and our city's future depends on it," says Haas.

Creating a Constituency for Conservation

Greater Philadelphia has always benefited from terrific recreational and outdoor assets, but now, thanks to several exciting efforts in the region, families, workers, and visitors are closer to nature than ever, creating new stewards and contributing to a community that understands and values environmental resources, both locally and globally.

In Philadelphia's storied Fairmount Park, America's first zoo is creating an innovative system of enclosed animal pathways and trails that allow people to experience some of the world's most exotic animals up close and personal. Among the first of its kind in the world, the Philadelphia Zoo's system of elevated and ground-level enclosures will allow humans and animals, such as orangutans, gorillas, big cats, and many others, to experience one another more closely than ever before. Vik Dewan, the zoo's chief executive officer, says that these experiences help visitors to "paint the bigger picture of how they could be more effective stewards of the world."

Creating a Constituency for Conservation

Across the Schuylkill River, in East Fairmount Park, the Audubon Society is working with the Philadelphia Water Department to conserve the East Park Reservoir, preserving a critical bird habitat and providing opportunities for urbanites to experience world-class birding in America's largest urban park. Residents and visitors can access these, and many other amenities using an increasingly integrated system of trails, called "The Circuit." When fully completed,

The Circuit will encompass 750 miles of interconnected paths for pedestrians and bikes, bringing users up close with some of our region's most significant waterways and natural areas, while getting to their destinations in healthy and sustainable ways.

Together, Philadelphia's remarkable outdoor assets are providing people with new and exciting connections to the natural world, building a stronger constituency for conservation and environmental stewardship.

Transformation for a Stronger Future

As the birthplace of American civic life, Philadelphia is blessed with great nonprofit institutions of all types, several as old as the nation itself. However, mature institutions face unique challenges brought on by rapid currents of economic, technological, and social change.

Several of Philadelphia's great institutions are responding to change admirably, transforming their business models, programming, and management structures to ensure the ongoing strength of their missions and a tradition of greatness.

The Opera Company of Philadelphia has experienced an artistic rebirth, largely because it was able to solve difficult financial problems through excellent management and the reinvention of its business model. These institutional advances, coupled with an emphasis on a creative balance between traditional and new operatic works that appeal to socially and culturally diverse audiences have led to the company's increasing recognition as one of America's great operas.

Revitalizing Great Organizations

The Academy of Natural Sciences, faced with an uncertain future, found a partner in Drexel University, leading to a merger in 2011. Now united, these two great institutions are able to capitalize on their respective strengths. The Academy's exceptional scientific resources and collection are now part of Drexel's Department of Biodiversity, Earth, and Environmental Sciences, which is poised to make meaningful contributions to scientific policy and practice affecting the regional and global environments.

History of the Foundation

In 1945 Otto and Phoebe Haas created the Phoebe Waterman Foundation to provide for their philanthropic concerns, specifically relief in postwar Europe, scholarships for fatherless children, and support for medical and educational institutions. The Foundation's development was made possible by the increasing success of the Rohm and Haas Company.

Over the next decade, the Foundation was supported by gifts from the family and continued to reflect the personal philanthropic interests of Otto and Phoebe Haas. In 1955, as annual grants exceeded $100,000, the Foundation hired its first director.

Upon Mr. Haas's death in 1960, the Foundation received the bulk of his estate; Mrs. Haas continued a program of regular gifts to the Foundation until her death in 1967. During this period, Otto and Phoebe's sons, John C. and F. Otto, headed the Foundation's board.

When the Foundation's name was changed to the Haas Community Fund in 1970, annual grants were $3.5 million. Within another four years, grants had doubled to $7 million per year and the Haas family renamed the Fund the William Penn Foundation, commemorating the 17th-century Quaker whose pursuit of an exemplary society led to the founding of Philadelphia, the City of Brotherly Love.

Throughout its history, the Foundation's grantmaking has focused on a range of topics, including arts and culture, human development, conservation and restoration, community fabric, education, and the environment.

From 2001 to 2011, the Foundation's strategic plan included funding programs in Arts & Culture; Children, Youth, & Families; and Environment & Communities. A new strategic planning process began in 2011, and is expected to result in a new ten-year plan with new revised funding programs to be announced in late 2012.

Over the years, presidents have included Richard Bennett, Harry Cerino, Kathy Engebretson, Janet Haas, M.D., Feather Houstoun, and Bernard Watson. The current president is Jeremy Nowak.

Our Founders

At the age of 15, German-born Otto Haas learned English while working as a bank clerk to support his widowed mother and younger siblings. He didn't know it then, but his newfound language skills would eventually help him create one of the world's largest manufacturers of unique specialty chemicals.

Clerking at the bank and working with a German dye and chemical manufacturer provided Mr. Haas with the savings he needed to immigrate to the United States, and he did so in 1901, before the age of 30. Within a few years, Dr. Otto Rohm, a friend from Germany who was developing a new product for the tanning industry, asked Mr. Haas if he could help him with his business. Mr. Haas agreed, and helped investigate the needs of leather tanners in the United States before returning to Germany to help Dr. Rohm develop the new business.

Mr. Haas returned to the United States in 1909 to establish the first American branch of the fledgling Rohm and Haas partnership in Philadelphia, a center of the tanning industry. The venture was a success, and by 1912 there was a branch in Chicago. In 1913, markets in South America were ready for the new approach to tanning, and Mr. Haas set out on a trip to establish offices there.

On the ship to South America, Otto Haas met Dr. Phoebe Waterman, an astronomer on her way to an assignment at an observatory in Argentina. Born on the North Dakota frontier, she was the daughter of an army lieutenant colonel posted to Fort Totten to rebuild the troops replacing Custer's regiment after Little Big Horn. Educated at Vassar and Berkeley, she had earned an M.A. in mathematics and astronomy and was among the first women to earn a Ph.D. in astronomy at the Berkeley/Lick Observatory. Phoebe Waterman and Otto Haas were married in 1914.

Rohm and Haas continued to prosper in subsequent decades, thanks to the firm's concentration on chemicals that had unique industrial properties and the hard work of its employees. Mr. Haas's personal concern for his employees and his financial policies enabled the company to survive the Depression without reducing its workforce. World War II coincided with the company's development of Plexiglas, a product well-suited for airplane cockpit enclosures.

For a century, Rohm and Haas Company created innovative technologies used in science and industry, and developed products to enhance the performance of electronics, paint and coatings, detergents, personal care products, adhesives, and plastics. The company's expertise in specialty chemicals was widely recognized. In 2008, Rohm and Haas Company agreed to merge with The Dow Chemical Company and the transaction closed in the second quarter of 2009.

Founding Philosophies

Our Vision

| Advancing a dynamic, diverse region with meaningful opportunity

Our Values

Stewardship: The Foundation's funds belong to the community at large. Members, directors, and staff act as trustworthy and responsible stewards of these funds, seeking to direct resources with wisdom and compassion. They strive to ensure that our grantmaking is not only relevant, effective, and efficient, but also mindful of the opportunity gap between low-income residents and their more advantaged peers.

Respect for Others: Members, directors, and staff value and respect all persons, recognizing that persons of disparate gender, race, age, religion, economic level, sexual orientation, and capacity contribute meaningfully to our world. All persons are treated with honesty, integrity, and fairness.

Commitment to Collaboration: Participation of the public, as well as that of other grantmakers and Foundation directors and staff, is sought to clarify issues of community concern and is facilitated through our role as a convener. Collegial relationships, collaboration, discussion, debate, and exchange of information are encouraged.

Learning: Grantees' accomplishments and the Foundation's activities, including evaluation and education efforts, provide means to promote learning and convey information to interested others. Foundation members, directors, and staff value learning opportunities that enhance the well-being of the region and its citizens.

Communication: Communication advances the Foundation's mission by enhancing the impact of our grantmaking and the effective use of our resources. Members, directors, and staff value clarity, coherence, and simplicity in communication. They listen and seek to learn from others in order to function with maximum efficacy.

Our Mission

To improve quality of life in the Greater Philadelphia region through efforts that foster rich cultural expression, strengthen children's futures, and deepen connections to nature and community. In partnership with others, we work to advance a vital, just, and caring community.

Our Principles

Long-Term Focus: We focus on work that will strengthen the region's viability and sustainability for the long term, rather than confining our efforts to short-term goals.

Integration: Whenever possible, we integrate grantmaking throughout rural, suburban, and urban areas of the Philadelphia region and across Foundation grantmaking categories.

Achievability: We support work that is based on sound objectives and measurement practices, is ambitious but achievable, and is relevant to our grantmaking capacity to contribute. We understand that success is predicated on the presence of social capital and viable partners and on sharing and applying insights learned from previous work in the field.

Leverage: We focus on work that has a multiplier effect; we seek points of leverage, including alignment of interests across the private and public sectors.

Relevance: We regularly and consistently ask our community for information regarding significant challenges faced by our region and for feedback about the value and effectiveness of our work and the relevance of our planned future directions.
